CIVIL SUITS AT NOVEMBER COURT

Slonaker-Walter Case for Balance
Alleged on Heating Plant at Local Theatre now on Trial. Asper Case is Next.

The civil suits which are to be tried at November Court were scheduled for to-day and the first one called was that of J. G. Slonaker vs John F. Walter for the balance alleged to be due on a heating plant installed at Walter's Theatre by the Gettysburg Supply House, during the proprietorship of Mr. Slonaker, who claims about $565.00.

Mr. Slonaker was the first witness called on the case and his testimony and the cross examination occupied the entire morning. A number of other witnesses were summoned. Mr. Walter claims that the plant did not work properly and it was on this account that the bill was not settled. He is represented by J. L. Williams Esq., while C. E. Stahl Esq., represents the defendant.

The jury in the case is composed of the following: William S. McCreary, William C. Alwine, Albert Kindig, George E. Hoffman, Noah Fleck, C. S. Gardner, Henry Byers, John Forry, Dorsey Lower, J. W. Peters, Philip Griest, and James Poist.

The other case to be tried at this term is that of the Adams Sporting Goods House, Hanover, W. J. Adams proprietor, against Charles F. Asper for a bill of $141.25 for repairing a motorcycle. Judgment in that amount was given the plaintiff by Squire Lilly at McSherrystown following a hearing at which the defendant was not present. The present case is an appeal from the decision of the Justice.

The jury to hear the case will be John C. Nary, R. H. Black, Zachariah Ford, Peter Yohe, Luther D. Sowers, John M. Warner, D. F. Wenk, W. C. Lerew, Amos Smith, John D. Riley, Albert Shultz and William Starnier.

MUST PAY TAX

Revenue Collectors Receive Final Instructions. Penalty is Severe.

Officials of the internal revenue office have received from Fred C. Kirkendall, of Lancaster, collector for the Ninth district, of which Adams county is a part, instructions to make a thorough canvass of their divisions and secure from each person liable to a tax under the provisions of the war tax bill, passed recently by congress, a sworn statement regarding the amount of their indebtedness under the act. The deputy collectors are now working on the special taxes imposed on manufacturers and dealers in cigars and tobacco, brokers, theaters, bowling alleys and billiard tables.

The special taxes due under this section of the act were due on November 1 and are payable for eight months, or until June 30. Collector Kirkendall has called the attention of the local deputies to that part of the law which requires a return to be made during the present month. Failure to make such return makes the person liable to an additional tax of 50 per cent, and to a penalty of not more than $500.

QUARANTINE ON ADAMS COUNTY

Another Herd is Condemned and Action Taken to Prevent Further Spread of the Disease. Inspectors Busy.

Adams County is now under quarantine on account of the appearance here of the foot and mouth disease. Action placing this measure on the county was taken at noon Wednesday by agents of the State Livestock Sanitary Board who, during the day, found a third herd of cattle infected with the disease. It is said to contain 56 head, though the location and owner have not been made public.

The principal effect of the quarantine here will be to prohibit shipments from Adams to other counties not quarantined, unless by special permit and for immediate slaughter. A state-wide quarantine was placed on Tuesday, preventing shipments outside of the state, except under those conditions.

Farmers wishing their herds inspected can call on any veterinarian for the purpose, but when the disease is found and herds are condemned the appraisal and killing must be done by a person designated by the state.

Ninety seven head of stock, in three herds, were killed in York County Wednesday making four to be killed since the fight against the epidemic began. The stock killed was as follows: Frank Hoke, Jackson township, 33 steers, 1 cow, 10 hogs; the Rev. Harry Loose, Paradise township, 10 steers, 2 cows and 10 hogs; William Menges, North Codorus township, 11 steers, calves, bulls and heifers, 4 cows, and 16 hogs.

From the above figures it is seen that the proportion of cows slain is very small compared with other stock. This is due to the disease having been brought in stock intended for fattening.

The epidemic will have no effect on the price of milk, Dr. O. M. Graybill, head of the inspectors, states. In all the herds which he and his associates have condemned the number of cows as compared to the whole is small. The supply of milk will suffer no appreciable falling off on account of the scourge, it is at the present time indicated, he states.

Meat will, however, be a scarce commodity in some localities in a few days if the general situation does not permit the moving of cattle. A scarcity of home killed meat is in sight, should the situation as it now exists continue.

Rumor has it that the disease exists in the vicinity of Lineboro, on the Maryland line. Cases have been discovered near Frederick. The stock suspected at Lineboro consists of two carloads received over the P. R. R. at the Spring Grove station, on election day, from Lancaster.

WOUNDED HIS LITTLE SISTER

Boys Shooting Wildly with Flobert Rifle Wound their Sister. Bullet Misses Vital Organ by an Inch, Hunting Accident.

Bedelia, the 8-year old daughter of J. M. Robertson, Mont Alto, was painfully hurt and narrowly escaped fatal injury, Tuesday evening, when a ball from a Flobert rifle, fired by one of her younger brothers, penetrated her right thigh.

Bedelia, Paul and George Robertson had gone to visit their grandfather in Mont Alto and while there got hold of a Flobert rifle of 22-caliber. This the boys loaded and then proceeded to shoot carelessly about them, intent solely on having a good time.

One of the bullets struck Bedelia in the right thigh and imbedded itself in the flesh. Entering the upper part of the thigh it pushed its way almost through and was afterward cut out by Dr. W. H. Brosius from the back part of the thigh. The child is out of danger and does not suffer much from the accident.

The little girl had a narrow escape from much more serious injury. Had the bullet been an inch to one side it would have penetrated the abdomen and there would have been very serious consequences, it is probable.

William Niedentohl, of Waynesboro, wore a fur cap while hunting, and when he went through some tall grass Bert Shockey fired at him, taking his cap for a rabbit. Niedentohl's face was cut by shot, but with no serious results.

WILL TRY FOR FILM

Firemen would have Gettysburgians See them in Movies.

At the monthly meeting of the fire company Wednesday evening Irvin D. Kelly, Jesse E. Snyder and R. H. Long were appointed a committee to see whether or not they could secure, for exhibition in one of the local moving picture theatres, the film taken during the late State firemen's convention in Harrisburg which showed the Gettysburg company with others in the parade.

C. Tyson Tipton, S. E. Swope, James B. Aumen and Oscar Lupp were appointed as a committee to get legal advice on whether the company has any case against the Reading railroad by whom they were refused excursion rates to the convention. The fact that the college has gotten a special rate, on account of Saturday's foot ball game, has given the local fire laddies hope.

E. C. Schriver and Oscar Lupp were instructed to ask council for this year's share of the fire insurance tax, which has always been turned over to the company in the past but which for some reason or other, has been neglected this year. Council has the money, $117.84, in its treasury.

KILLED TWO BUCKS

They are Shot within Two Minutes of Each Other.

The Monterey hunt club, which is in camp at Newmans, performed this unusual feat of bringing down two deer within two minutes, about 2:30 o'clock Wednesday afternoon.

John A. Martin shot a 165 pound, 10 prong buck, and, a few seconds later, another buck fell to the ground mortally wounded. The credit for shooting this deer has not been awarded. It is divided between Sharon Mentzer, William Hollinger. This buck had five prongs and weighed about 165 pounds. These are the only deer shot thus far by the Monterey club.

C. E. Miller and Arthur Taylor, of Biglerville, shot a 170 pound deer while on their way to the Taylor camp on Tuesday. They had been on the mountain only a few minutes.

MEXICO PLUNGED INTO NEW WAR

National Convention Orders Carranza's Ejection.

VILLA COMMANDS TROOPS

"First Chief" Refused to Recognize Gutierrez as President and His Ejection is Ordered.

AGUAS CALIENTES, Mex., Nov. 12.—General Venustiano Carranza's conditional offer to resign has been rejected by the national convention and the troops assembled in Aguas Calientes have been ordered to march on Mexico City and drive the Carranzistas from power. General Villa has been placed in supreme command of the troops.

The official announcement that General Carranza's proffer had been rejected stated that he had expressed his readiness to resign as soon as the peace conference elected a provisional president free from the influence of General Villa. This was taken as a slap at the convention for electing General Eulalio Gutierrez.

As soon as the convention had acted on the message from General Carranza, General Jose Isabel Robles, secretary of war in the cabinet of General Gutierrez appointed General Villa commander-in-chief of all the forces, under the authority of the convention.

The movement of troops southward has been quietly going on for several days, and special trains were made up to rush heavy forces to the front at once.

The first big battle is expected to take place at Queretaro, where General Pablo Gonzales is said to have 40,000 Carranza troops and many guns. Twenty thousand revolutionary troops are south and east of Aguas Calientes, while 35,000 more have been gathered in Aguas Calientes for the march on Mexico City, which has been expected since General Carranza refused to accept the first mandates of the convention.

General Felipe Angeles, commander of the artillery forces in General Villa's army, has 102 guns and a large supply of ammunition, a great part of which has been brought across the American border at Juarez before General Huerta retired.

Carranza Troops Repulsed.

El Paso, Tex., Nov. 12.—Carranza troops, a part of the strong garrison at Monterey, were attacked and repulsed by a regiment of General Villa's forces at Hipolito, between Torreon and Saltillo.

Captain Ezevilo, of the Carranza troops, was severely wounded. Seventeen Carranzistas were killed. The casualties of the Villa troops were not stated.

With several of his 55-millimeter field pieces placed at a range of 3000 yards, Governor Maytorena has repelled artillery fire on the Carranza garrison at Naco, Sonora. The garrison replied, but their shells fell short.

The fire was discovered in four different places in the warehouse. An alarm was sent to the fire company, and when it arrived great tongues of flames were leaping from all sections of the large warehouse, which was 1000 feet in length and 50 feet in width.

HURL NEW ARMY AGAINST CZAR

Kaiser Rushes Reinforcements to Check Invasion.

PRUSSIAN PEOPLE IN PANIC

Russian Cossacks on Another Great Raid in Germany—Investment of Cracow Near as Austrian Linu Breaks.

Petrograd, Nov. 12.—Germany is making frantic efforts to stem the tide of defeat on the eastern war front.

The German railroad lines in Prussia are crowded night and day with trains bringing fresh troops from the western theater of the war to positions behind Thorn and Posen. Artillery in great numbers is being transported.

While the Russians have been able to destroy all rail communication near the frontier the German lines are in full operation further back. This great troop movement by the Kaiser, which virtually is an admission that Germany is in grave danger, has caused a wave of depression to sweep over the countryside and the populace is fleeing.

Many thousands of German families have hurriedly packed their belongings and fled behind the Posen frontier, fearing the Russians may wage reprisals.

The Russian invasion of Germany by way of Silesia and Posen evidently was a shock to the German strategists, who believed that the invasion would be launched through East Prussia.

They believed it impossible, because of weather conditions, for the Russians to bring forces up to the frontier through central Poland. Now that this has been done successfully, the Germans are making all haste to concentrate their forces around Posen and Thorn in order to combat the Russian advance.

On the Galician frontier, the Austrian army is confident that it will enjoy a respite under the protection of the forts of Cracow, but the populace fails to share this optimism. Inhabitants of "the gateway to Silesia" are fleeing in fear of a bombardment by the Russians, who are only twenty miles away.

Another great raid by the Russian Cossacks in East Prussia is in full swing. The dashing Cossacks of General Rennenkampf are repeating the drive of devastation that early in the war cut the German lines of communication. This time the Cossacks have invaded East Prussia at the southwest of the Mazurian lake region, instead of at the north.

Russian cavalry already has reached the outskirts of Soldau. Three railroads in that region have been torn up and more than a dozen railroad bridges destroyed. Continuation of this raid into the district north of Soldau will cut off the German army that invaded the Suwalki district and was driven back upon the Mazurian lakes.

At the same time the Russian army in Western Poland is continuing its campaign for the capture of the mighty Austrian fortress of Cracow. The Austro-German forces driven from Czeszochowa have rallied on the upper Vistula and hard fighting is going on there. An official statement says that the resistance to the Russian attacks can not be long continued at this point, however.

Germany's Overtures For Peace.

LONDON, Nov. 12.—A Rome dispatch to the Post says: "Germany, alarmed at the Russian success, has made preliminary offers of peace to the Russian government, which have been rejected."

GERMAN GENERALS TAKEN

Von Liebert, Von Mackenzen and Mathiesse Are Captured by Russians.

Petrograd, Nov. 12.—The complete triumph of the Russian forces is established by the fact that they took as prisoners three German generals. General Edward Von Liebert was captured at Lodz after being wounded. He was at one time the head of the German general staff.

General August Von Mackenzen, who led the Seventeenth German Army Corps, was taken prisoner at Sierad. He and his staff were surrounded in a sudden night attack and forced to yield.

The third general taken by the Russians is General Mathiesse.

ected against Lombardtze (two miles north of Nienport) a counter attack which has been repulsed, and has made vain attempts to debouch from Dixmude, on the left bank of the Yser.

"There is nothing new to report from the rest of the front.

"On our left wing the fighting was resumed Tuesday between Nienport and the Ys, with a very great degree of severity. Generally speaking, our front was maintained, in spite of the violence and the strength of the German attacks, directed against certain of our points of support.

"To the north of Nienport we were even able to recapture Lombardtze and advance beyond this town, but toward the end of the day the Germans succeeded in taking possession of Dixmude.

"We still hold our positions on the approaches to this town, along the canal from Nienport to Ypres, which has been firmly occupied. The fighting was very hot at these places.

"The British troops, attacked also at several points, succeeded everywhere in stopping the enemy.

"On the rest of the front the general situation shows no change, with the exception of slight progress by our forces to the north of Soissons and in the region to the west of Vailly, on the right bank of the Aisne. Outside of these two points the state of the weather permitted only minor engagements, which resulted successfully for us. Particularly at Coincourt, north of the forest of Parroy, on the Franco-German frontier, eighteen miles east of Nancy, we routed a detachment of the enemy."

KING CALLS BRITAIN

TO UTMOST SACRIFICE

War May End Sooner Than Expected, Says Premier.

LONDON, Nov. 12.—England must triumph in the war with Germany, regardless of any sacrifice that the gaining of a final victory will demand.

This was the message conveyed to parliament in London by King George in his speech, which provided the chief feature when the house of lords and the house of commons reconvened.

"Throughout the empire," said the king, "there is a fixed determination to secure, whatever the sacrifice, the triumph of our arms and the vindication of our cause."

That the war may be concluded much earlier than had been expected was intimated by Premier Asquith in his speech in the house of commons. He declared that the primary aims of the Germans had been frustrated.

"The country," said the premier, "now sees the allies in a position wherein England in conjunction with the allies has defeated the first designs of Germany."

"I doubt whether the war will last as long as was originally predicted."

A note of criticism was sounded by A. Bonar Law, leader of the opposition, who asked how the Germans were able to concentrate a superior force in the Pacific. He also said the country wanted to know the government proceedings regarding the treatment of aliens.

The opposition leader declared he believed the press had been muzzleed more than was necessary and he asked that any information consistent with the military necessities be given to the British public.

November Joe

The Detective of the Woods

CHAPTER XI. Phedre Pointarre.

IT was still early afternoon when we arrived in Lendeville, a few scattered farms and a single general store. Outside one of the farmhouses Joe paused.

"I know the chap that lives in here," he said. "He's a pretty mean kind of a man, Mr. Quaritch. I may find a way to make him talk, though if he thought I wanted information he'd not start with it."

"Say, McAndrew," began Joe, "what's your price for hiring two strong horses and a good buckboard to take us and our outfit on from here to the Burnt Lands by Sandy pond?"

"Twenty dollars,"

"Huh!" said Joe, "we don't want to buy the old horses!"

The Scotchman's shaven lips (he wore a chin beard and whiskers) opened. "It would na' pay to do it for less."

"Then there's others as will."

"And what might their names be?" inquired McAndrew ironically.

"Them as took up Bank Clerk Atterson when he was here six weeks back."

"Well, you're wrong!" cried McAndrew, "for Bank Clerk Atterson just walked in with young Simon Pointarre and lived with the family at their new mill. So the price is twenty or I'll be harness a horse for ye."

"Then I'll have to go on to Simon Pointarre. I've heard him well spoken of."

"Have ye now? That's queer, for he—"

"Maybe, then, it was his brother," said Joe quickly.

"Which?"

"The other one that was with Anderson at Red river."

"There was one one, only the old man, Simon and the two girls."

"Well, anyway, I'll ask the Pointarres' price before I close with yours."

"I'll make a reduce to $17 if ye agree here and now."

November said something further of Atterson's high regard for Simon Pointarre, which gounded old McAndrew to fury.

"And I suppose it was love of Simon that made him employ that family," he snarled. "Oh, yes, that's comic. 'Twas Simon and no that grinning lassie they call Phedre! Atterson? Tush! I tell ye, if ever a man made a fule of himself—"

At the store which was next visited we learned the position of the Pointarres' and the fact that old Pointarre, the daughters, Phedre and Claire, and one son, Simon, were at home.

The door was opened by a girl of about twenty years of age. Her bright brown eyes and hair made her very good looking. Joe gave her a quick glance.

"I came to see your sister," said he.

"Simon," called the girl, "here's a man to see Phedre."

"What's your business?" growled a man's voice from the inner room.

"Why sent you?"

"Can't tell that, but I guess Miss Pointarre will know when I give her the message."

"Well, I suppose you'd best see her. She's down bringing in the cows. You'll find her below there in the meadow."

Joe thanked him and we set off. A twig broke under my foot, and the girl swung round at the noise.

"What do you want?" she asked.

She was tall and really gloriously handsome.

"I've come from Atterson. I've just seen him," said November.

"There are many people who see him every day. What of that?"

"Huh! Don't they read the newspaper in Lendeville? There's something about him going round. I came thinking you'd sure want to hear," said November.

The color rose in Phedre's beautiful face.

"They're saying," went on Joe, "that he robbed the bank where he is employed of $100,000, and instead of trying to get away on the train or by one of the steamers he made for the woods."

Phedre turned away as if bored.

"What interest have I in this? It enuemes me to listen."

"Wait!" replied November. "With the police I went and soon struck Atterson's trail on the old colonial post road and in time came up with Atterson himself high Red river. The police takes Atterson prisoner, but they found nothing. Though they searched him and all round about the camp, they found nothing."

"He had hidden it, I suppose."

"So the police thought. And I thought the same till—November's gaze never left her face—"till I see his eyes. The pupils were like pin points in his head." He paused and added: "I got the bottle of whisky that was in his neck. It'll go in as evidence."

"That Atterson was drugged and the bank property stole from him. You see," continued Joe, "this robbery wasn't altogether Atterson's own idea."

"Ah!"

"No, I guess he had the first notion of it when he was on his vacation six weeks back. He was in love with a wonderful handsome girl. Blue eyes she had and black hair, and her teeth was as good as yours. She pretended to be in love with him, but all along she was in love with—well, I can't say who she was in love with—herself likely. Anyway, I expect she used all her influence to make Atterson rob the bank and then light out for the woods with the stuff. He does all she wants. On his way to the woods she meets him with a pack of food and necessities. In that pack was a bottle of drugged whisky. She asks him where he's going to camp that night, he suspects nothing and tells her, and off she goes in a canoe up Red river till she comes to opposite where he's lying drugged. She lands and robs him, but she don't want him to know who done that, so she plays an old game to conceal her tracks. She's a rare active young woman, so she carries out her plan, gets back to her canoe and home to Lendeville. Need I tell any more about her?"

During Joe's story Phedre's color had slowly died away.

"You are very clever!" she said bitterly. "But why should you tell me all this?"

"Because I'm going to advise you to hand over the $100,000 you took from Atterson. I'm in this case for the bank."

"I?" she exclaimed violently. "Do you dare to say that I had anything whatever to do with this robbery, that I have the $100,000? Bah! I know nothing about it. How should I?"

Joe shrugged his shoulders. "Then I beg your pardon, Miss Pointarre, and I say good bye. I must go and make my report to the police and let them act their own way." He turned, but before he had gone more than a step or two she called to him.

"There is one point you have missed for all your cleverness," she said. "Suppose what you have said is true, may it not be that the girl who robbed Atterson took the money just to return it to the bank?"

"Don't seem to be that way, for she has just denied all knowledge of the property and denied she had it before two witnesses. Besides, when Atterson comes to know that he's been made a cat's paw of he'll be liable to turn king's evidence. No, miss, your only chance is to hand over the stuff—here and now."

"To you?" she scoffed. "And who are you? What right have you?"

"I'm in this case for the bank. Old McAndrew knows me well and can tell you my name."

"What is it?"

"People mostly call me November Joe."

She threw back her head—every attitude, every movement of hers was wonderful.

"Now, supposing that the money could be found, what would you do?"

"I'd go to the bank and tell them I'd make shift to get every cent back safe for them if they'd agree not to prosecute anybody."

"So you are man enough not to wish to see me in trouble?"

November looked at her. "I was sure not thinking of you at all," he said simply, "but of Bank Clerk Atterson, who's lost the girl he robbed for and ruined himself for. I'd hate to see that chap overpowered with a dose of jail too. But the bank people only want their money, and I guess if they get that they'll be apt to think the less about the robbery the better. So if you take my advice—why, now's the time to see old McAndrew. You see, Miss Pointarre, I've got the clinch on you."

She stood still for awhile. "I'll see old man McAndrew," she cried suddenly. "I'll lead. It's near enough this way."

Joe turned after her, and I followed. Without arousing McAndrew's suspicions, Joe satisfied the girl as to his identity.

Before dark she met us again. "There!" she said, thrusting a packet into Joe's hand. "But look out for yourself! Atterson isn't the only man who'd break the law for love of me. Think of that at night in the lonely bush!"

I saw her sharp white teeth grind together as the words came from between them.

"My!" ejaculated November, looking after her receding figure, "she's a bad loser, ain't she, Mr. Quaritch?"

Why He Objected.

"Now," said the principal to one of the pupils at the close of the lesson in which he had touched on the horror of war, "do you object to war, my boy?"

"Yes, sir; I do," was the fervent answer.

"Now tell us why."

"Because," said the youth, "war makes history, an' I jest hate history."

CONTESTANTS' BEST EFFORTS

Announcement of Last Special Offer
Brings Interest to Highest Point
Possible and Great Results are now Indicated.

The announcement of the last special offer in The Times-News circulation campaign, has put the final touches to this most interesting race and from now on it will indeed be a battle for ballots. This offer is the one that has long been waited by the contestants and their friends and now that they have it the indications are that they are going to use it to the very fullest extent.

And as the work grows harder on the part of the contestants the race also seems to be getting closer between the leaders so that it will take up to the very last minute to decide the winners. And because of that fact it is going to take work and good hard work for anyone to win one of the prizes. There are so many active contestants that no one can waste a single moment or lost a single opportunity to get a subscription.

With the announcement of this last special offer many of the contestants have enlisted the support of their friends who are now active in gathering subscriptions. These friends will prove a great help and in many cases will be instrumental in helping a contestant win a prize.

If you have any friends who have said that they would like to see you one of the prize winners and that they would help you in every way possible, now is the time to see them and enlist their support. Do not ask them for their subscription alone, but give them a receipt book and ask them to help you get subscriptions of others. They will be able to get subscriptions among their friends and acquaintances that you could not get and as a consequence these will be in addition to what you get yourself and will put you just that much nearer the prize of your choice.

The program is clear cut, at times including in the song, yell and action of the athletic field and at other moments picturing the informal but more serious gathering at the fraternity house and finally closing with an exceptionally bright and captivating little sketch.

THE GERMAN TAKE DIXMUDE

Belgian Town Captured After Fierce Fighting.

MAKE PROGRESS NEAR LILLE

The Smashing Offensive of Kaiser's Troops Make Headway on Line in Belgium.

London, Nov. 12.—Driving forward with increasing fury and battling more violently than at any time since they made their stand along the Aisne river and then swept forward through Belgium, the Germans hammered the defense of the allied forces along the line from Lille to the coast and at the end of the day's fighting had advanced their battle front at many places.

The fighting was fiercely waged on both sides. The artillery of the invaders kept up a continual fire on the positions of the French and British forces and the latter were compelled to evacuate many of their positions.

The most important gains were made on Belgian soil, where the Germans recaptured Dixmude, held by the Belgian and British forces for the past several days. Here the Kaiser's troops, by a series of desperate attacks, forced the allied forces to retire from the town for the first time in more than a week. They held a commanding position along the Yser river.

Dixmude is in the northwestern end of the Flanders battle line, which runs southeasterly to Ypres, in Belgium, and then southerly to Arras, in France. The vicinity of Dixmude has been the scene of severe fighting since the Germans made their first dash toward Calais, and the Belgian town has suffered greatly by the artillery duelling. Dixmude lies in from the coast, about fifteen miles southeast of Ostend and almost due west from the French port of Dunkirk.

According to reports from Berlin and partly confirmed by the official statements from the Paris war office the Germans, in addition to taking the first line of the allies' positions west of Langemarck, took 2000 prisoners and six machine guns.

Further along the line and in the region of Ypres, where the Germans for several days have attempted to drive a wedge through the lines of British troops, the Germans claim to have driven the enemy from St. Eloi, while they repelled counterattacks and held their advantage and positions to the north of Armentieres and dominating that section of the battle line. Near Lille, on French soil, the invaders also progressed and inflicted heavy losses on the French, who attempted to recapture trenches, taken during the past two days.

In the Argonne region, the violent onslaughts of the French forces were repulsed and the advance checked in that section of the field of conflict.

The French claim that north of Soissons, on the center of the battle line, their offensive continues to gain ground and that their advance in that region is progressing favorably. To the west of Vailly, on the west bank of the Aisne, successes crowned the efforts of the French troops to gain, but according to the official statement there were no important changes on the front of either of the two armies, the weather permitting only minor engagements.

The following official bulletins were issued:

GERMAN.
"We made good progress Tuesday on the Yser branch of the Ypres and took Dixmude by storm, capturing more than 2000 prisoners and nine machine guns.

"Further south our troops crossed the canal, and west of Langemarck captured the first line of the enemy's position. About 2000 infantry were taken prisoners and six machine guns were captured.

"South of Ypres we have driven the enemy out of St. Eloi.

"Despite fierce counter attacks by the British the dominating heights to the north of Armentieres remain in our hands.

"Our attack has made progress to the southwest of Lille. The French suffered heavy losses while attempting to recapture commanding heights to the north of Vienne-le-Chateau, in the forest of Argonne, and to the northeast and south of Verdun French attacks were everywhere repulsed.

"No important information is at hand from the eastern theater of the war.

"It is officially reported from Vienna that heavy fighting at Shabats and Lesnitsa was continued through the night and some of the enemy's positions were taken by storm. To the east of Kupanje the pursuit of the enemy is being continued.

"There are movements of strong Russian forces in East Galicia and in Bessarabia (a government of Southwestern Russia), this apparently being in connection with the Turkish war.

"General headquarters at Constantinople reports that, although snow is falling and in spite of a heavy atmosphere our offensive on the Caucasian frontier is maintained."

FRENCH.

"The enemy has continued all day his effort of Tuesday without accomplishing any new result. He has di-

November, 1914 PUBLIC SERVICE

PUBLIC intelligence is grasping the economic principle that duplication of plant is destructive of wealth and not beneficial but injurious to the public; that unless the owners of public utilities are allowed a reasonable rate of return, high grade service is an impossibility and the public must eventually suffer.

Perfumes in the Orient.

Oriental have always been exceedingly lavish in the use of perfumes; it seems as if the warmer the climate the more perfume is used. The Hebrews manufactured perfumes chiefly from spices brought from Arabia, also from aromatic plants grown in their own country.

Culture.

Taking culture in the individual or meaning a development of all the faculties it follows that the most cultured nation is that in which there is the greatest number of all round men. And if this be true, we must at once realize how hopeless is the task of attempting to estimate the extent of culture in various nations.

Pleasing Oriental Custom.

An oriental custom still in use is to perfume guestrooms with sweet odors and when the guest arrives he is sprinkled with rose water. In olden times it used to be customary to follow up the sprinkling process with incense rubbed on the hands and face. This ceremony is repeated at the departure of the guest.

Be Pretty! Turn Cray Hair Dark

Try Grandmother's Old Favorite
Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray; also ends dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is messy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe for about 50 cents.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy.

RALPH BINGHAM.

Ralph Bingham, another number on the forthcoming entertainment course, is a humorist who for thirty-five years has been making large audiences laugh and still is in the prime of life. This is accounted for by the fact that his first appearance was at the age of six years, when he traveled as the "Boy Orator of America." His appearances on the American continent number nearly 10,000.

T. De Witt Talmage, after hearing Bingham, said: "Bless Bingham and all the apostolic college of humorists. The man that makes me laugh is my benefactor. God bless all skillful punsters, all those who merrily surprise us with unusual juxtaposition of words. There is a divine mission."

Mr. Bingham is an impersonator, a humorist, a violinist, a pianist and a comedian. His wife travels with him and plays the accompaniment for his vocal and violin selections.

A Change Of Heart

By WILLIAM CHANDLER

Jim Edwards was young and frisky and full of Old Nick. He was riding on a suburban train one day on his way to the city when an old gentleman of eminently respectable appearance came into the car and took a seat beside him. Jim was reading in a morning journal an account of a prizefight. The gentleman took from his pocket a copy of the Missionary Intelligencer, opened it and began to peruse it.

"Have you seen an account of the bout between Andy Sheehan and the Philadelphia Kid, sir?" asked Jim in a deferential tone.

"No. I don't read accounts of such inhuman transactions."

"I suppose you wouldn't care to see a fight of that kind. But don't you think if we kill off all blood-spilling affairs it's bad for the military spirit? We must have wars, you know, even if to protect ourselves from a foreign enemy, and if we young fellows should get too soft we'd all have to knuckle under in case of an invasion. For my part I think the way the Kid stood up against Sheehan was admirable. He broke the big man's jaw and let a pint of blood from his nose."

At this the gentleman turned his back squarely on the young man and buried himself in his journal.

Jim, who had been amusing himself with the old man, smiled inwardly, much pleased at the shock he had given him. When they reached the city Jim waited till the passenger to the door was cleared of the outgoing passengers, then arose to go himself. On the seat beside him he espied a pocketbook. It must have belonged to the gentleman who had sat beside him, and Jim hurried after him, but failed to catch him. An examination of the contents of the pocketbook revealed the name of Howard Spangler and his address, besides some $20 in bills. In a pocket by itself was a small photograph of a girl evidently in her teens. Jim felt in love with it on sight.

Instead of sending the find to the address Jim waited till evening, when he thought he might possibly get sight of the original of the photograph, then went to the house, rang the bell and told the butler who answered it that he would like to see Mr. Spangler. He was ushered into the library, where sat the owner of the pocketbook and near by, doing some fancy work, the girl of the photograph. When the old gentleman saw the advocate of prizefighting he frowned. Jim handed him the book and said:

"After you left the train this morning, sir, I found this where you had been sitting. It contained your name and address, so I am enabled to return it to you."

Mr. Spangler, without unbending, took the pocketbook. He was too much of a gentleman to examine the contents to see that all had been returned, but he was not cordial. He simply thanked Jim and waited for him to withdraw.

"Don't you think, father," said the girl, surprised at her father's want of warmth in acknowledging his obligation, "that inasmuch as the gentleman has taken the trouble to return your pocketbook in person we should ask him to rest before going?"

The father's mind was on Jim's prizefighting proclivities, and he was not to be moved to any courtesy to one of that kind.

"Young man," he said, "I have thanked you for returning my pocketbook. I do not offer you a reward, for you do not look like one who would accept it. Indeed, I was surprised to meet with one having the appearance of a gentleman advocating the barbarity of prizefighting."

Jim colored under the reproach to the roots of his hair. He had had his fun with the old gentleman, and he was now paying the price. The young lady took pity on him.

"Why, papa," she said, "so many persons take an interest in such matters that you can't blame one young man for doing so. After all, I don't think as many persons are killed in the prize ring as at football, and you know you shouted and waved at brother when he knocked down five men and broke the leg of one carrying the ball to goal."

Mr. Spangler looked embarrassed. Jim, bestowing a silent blessing on the young lady, with regained courage pushed on to undo the damage he had done by his facetiousness on the train.

"Ralph Spangler!" he exclaimed. "The great Pennsylvania football player?"

"My son," said the old man proudly. "I've seen him play some of his best games. During his supremacy on the football there was no man who could do him. I congratulate you, sir, on having such a son."

"You've seen him play?" exclaimed the old man, his eyes lighting at the mention of his son's prowess.

"Indeed I have. I witnessed the game in which he fell—accidentally, of course—on Simpson and crushed him. That was a glorious game. Your noble boy carried the ball to goal amid the huzzas of every person present."

"He won the game!" cried Mr. Spangler. Polly, bring a decanter and some glasses. Our friend must drink to your brother's health."

That is the way Jim Edwards made his wife's acquaintance. It looked equally at first, but it came out all right.
